LACK OF EDUCATION

- Design flexible, trans-friendly re-entry programs which allow mental health support and counselling for trans individuals who had to drop out due to stigma, with mental health support and mentorship.
- Offer dedicated scholarships for trans and gender-nonconforming students to reduce economic barriers to continuing education.
- Mandate gender-neutral uniforms, restroom access, and anti-bullying policies to
- Exchange one hour of teaching for one hour of learning. No money, just mutual growth.
- Online avatars, pseudonyms, and full anonymity—learn without ever outing yourself.
- Let trans youth design their own syllabi: what they wish school had taught.
- Allow name and gender changes in school records.
- Create peer support clubs or diversity clubs in schools.
- Promote transgender inclusion in youth activities, ensuring all children feel accepted. Flashcard-style tattoo stickers for quick, on-body learning—languages, formulas, history timelines.
- Night BloomLate-night schools run by and for queer youth—quiet, safe, and stigma-free hours.
- Appoint LGBTQ+-sensitive counselors in schools to support trans youth and eradicate any problems faceed.
- Create diversity clubs where trans students find community and allies, and find solace, strength in their gender identity.
- Offer fee waivers or subsidies for trans students from low-income backgrounds.
- Create career bootcamps led by successful trans professionals that offer hands-on, industry-specific training and mentoring, helping trans learners transition into the workforce confidently.
- Build a centralized digital platform that curates free online courses, resources, and workshops tailored specifically for trans learners, including topics like coding, design, and entrepreneurship.
- Design mobile schools or pop-up learning hubs that visit remote areas with high trans populations, offering free, on-the-go education, mentorship, and workshops led by trans educators.

- Launch nationwide campaigns with trans influencers and activists to educate the public on gender diversity and rights.
- Create gender-diverse reading materials for children in primary schools, including storybooks with trans characters.
- Incorporate gender-inclusive health education in school curriculums to provide factual, inclusive information to students.
- Set up bridge programs offering free foundational education and digital literacy for trans individuals who've dropped out.
- Partner with ed-tech platforms to provide trans-focused scholarships and mentorship for upskilling and certification courses.
- Launch mobile learning vans or community classes in areas with high trans populations, bringing education directly to them.
- Ensure healthcare providers are knowledgeable and sensitive to the needs of transgender individuals.
- Educate families to create supportive environments for transgender individuals.
- Foster education through real-life stories and diverse portrayals of transgender experiences.
- Create support groups and supportive spaces for trans individuals to find access to resources and education programs and jobs
- Partner up with job portals to provide trans-focused jobs and mentorship for upskilling and certification courses.
- Have anonymous learning institutes which doesn’t require face to face interaction with peers allowing trans individuals to protect their gender identity if they feel unsafe
- Trans-led libraries of banned books, street zines, and whispered histories.
- QR-coded park benches: scan and get a micro-lesson from a trans educator nearby.
- Performative education where drag artists teach math, science, and identity with flair.
- Build trans-inclusive hostels or offer gender-neutral housing options.
- Organize trans-friendly job and internship fairs at colleges.
- Allow gender-neutral dress codes during ceremonies and interviews.